

SPACE MAKERS

Art and Disability in North Carolina

June 7 – October 12, 2025

Space Makers is part of the rich tapestry of work by artists with disabilities in North Carolina. There are limitless ways that disability impacts how we navigate the world, and the works created by these artists reflects that variety in abundance. In the exhibition, artists with disabilities claim their voices and command space through visual, experiential, and often experimental artwork. The work in this exhibition offers glimpses into the world of each artist and engages the viewer in conversation about what it means to navigate a landscape of access and ability.
